Venus in the Kitchen: Recipes for Seduction Pilaff Bey

This lighthearted literary collection of aphrodisiac recipes contains a variety of legendary dishes which are said to enhance sexuality and restore faltering desire. While not every gourmet will be able to obtain skink, a reptile native to the deserts of Africa, or clean and truss young crane, or find leopard's marrow to cook in goat's milk (a recipe for offsetting timidity) the ubiquitous oyster is present in various recipes along with other items commonly found in American cupboards. The dry British wit of Norman Douglas, founder of the Capri school of writing, enhances this delightful excursion into culinary erotica. is a one-of-a-kind book sure to interest students of esoterica-and erotica. Makes an amusing gift for the significant other who has everything.
